Racial tally for RUSD

Lower whites, higher blacks this year

BARBARA ERICKSON

Diamond Unified schools have seen a shift in the racial makeup of their white and black students this year, continuing a steady trend since 1977, but the population of other racial categories has remained in the same period. District records show that the white population has shown the greatest drop since 1971 when whites made up 61.6 percent of the enrollment. Blacks at that time were 28.1 percent. As overall school enrollment dropped, the percentage of blacks increased—even though their numbers were decreasing. Last year, blacks were 40 percent of the population, and this year's drop was the first at least since 1971. The racial profiles of in the district's secondary schools changed little from last year. The greatest changes were at Adams, which went from 34 percent white and 54 percent black last year to 30 percent white and 58 percent black this year. Crespi gained white population and lost blacks, from 58 percent white and 22 percent black to 61 percent white and 20 percent black. Pinole Valley High School had the largest percentage of whites at 71 percent. Kennedy, at 68 percent, had the highest proportion of blacks. The Hispanic population was highest at Ells with 27 percent and at Downer with 23 percent. Asians have the strongest representation at El Cerrito High with 15 percent.

Among the elementary schools the following showed the highest percentage of white students: Collins, 84 percent; Ellerhorst, 79 percent; Kerry Hills, 79 percent; Shannon, 80

Studying the symbols of Christmas

This week's column is by the Rev. Charles Dickey, pastor of St. Patrick's Episcopal Church in El Cerrito.

By CHARLES DICKEY

The Christmas season is a beautiful and joyful riot of symbols, stories and meaning. Perhaps if we explore some of its origins and purposes we can see the connectedness and derive even more pleasure and meaning from it.

To begin, let's start with the Feast of the Epiphany (Jan. 6) which is the close of the 12-day season of Christmas. "Epiphany" means to "show forth," "to manifest." This feast was first observed in what we know today

Rules set for soliciting

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — The City Council last week took a bit of extra time to grant two non-profit groups permission to solicit for funds in Albany.

Citizens for a Better Environment had applied for a permit for Dec. 13 through Jan. 29, while the Berkeley Women's Center had requested a permit for Jan. 1 through April 14.

In the past, the council generally has maintained a policy of not granting fundraising permits for periods of more than a month. But at their regular Monday night meeting last week, they faced one request for six weeks and another for three and a half months.

The situation sparked a discussion

Council debates who gets a permit of how flexible the policy should be, as well as consideration of what might happen if a flood of applications should come in from groups all wanting to canvass at the same time.

Council members seemed to agree that the policy should not be rigid, and approved the Citizens for a Better Environment application for all six weeks.

This prompted an objection from a member of the public, Stephen Radkey, who said, "Since there is a 30-day policy, I do not understand why we don't adhere to it. We're making a mockery of our own rules and regulations."

But council members also agreed that the policy should be applied strictly when circumstances warrant, and granted the Berkeley Women's Center request for the first month only, giving the group the option of returning to apply again for subsequent months.

This brought another comment from Radkey: "How can you restrict one group to a month and allow another six weeks? This seems to me to be somewhat arbitrary?"

Albany may get marina

Developer is interested in waterfront growth

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — A Tiburon-based developer has expressed interest in developing Albany's waterfront on the basis of a master plan completed six years ago.

In a recent letter to the City Council, Howard Cohen proposed to lease and develop the part of Albany's waterfront now occupied by the Albany landfill in partnership with a planner who worked on the Richmond Marina.

The master plan for the area, drawn up by the planning and engineering firm Environ in 1976, envisions a marina, recreational facilities and public park on the site.

In a telephone interview, Cohen said his proposal is still in the preliminary stage, but that he and associates "are willing to invest some time and money" to see whether the project is feasible.

"We feel it's probably a relatively advantageous time to do it," he said. "We hope that we can get our building costs down."

It also would be preferable to develop the site before the state starts reconstruction of the local highway system, he added.

Cohen described himself as a management consultant and real estate investor with active interests in both the United Kingdom and California. He also has developed residential and commercial properties in South Africa and Australia.

By profession, he is a chartered accountant — the British version of a CPA.

If he takes on the Albany waterfront development, he would be joined by attorney Anthony Wright of Thompson and Wright, an architectural and planning firm which worked on the Richmond Marina.

Cohen said he likes the idea of developing a marina, and was involved in one marina project in the Seychelles a long time ago. "Regrettably, I never got to see it built because the government changed."

On the Albany project, he would want to work in "harmony" with the city, he said. "So many developers go into a development where a city has a project and they rape the city... They try everything to maximize profits."

Cohen said his proposal would include a large fishing pier with public access and would take into consideration the need to protect the tidelands.

But he emphasized that firm plans still are quite a way off, saying, "There are lots of hurdles to be overcome."

Perhaps the most difficult initial obstacle is the long-standing legal battle over the landfill. The city initiated proceedings to shut the landfill some seven years ago, but the operator subsequently filed two lawsuits to prevent it and has continued stockpiling materials at the site.

Albany Administrative Officer William Haden said he has received many inquiries from people interested in waterfront development, but most of them fall through. "This guy seems the most interested," he said of Cohen.

Cohen's letter to the City Council has been referred to the Waterfront Committee, which will discuss the matter Jan. 13. Cohen said he will be at that meeting.

New tales from young and old

A multi-generational anthology

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

ALBANY — Marcy Alancraig admits that when she gets involved in a project, she is likely to give it her all.

Alancraig, 28, is a writer and teacher who served as editor for a just-published anthology, Across the Generations, subtitled "Writings by young and old." Not only is Alancraig up to her elbows in publicizing the book and arranging readings from it, but she is already busy with plans for volume two.

A series of readings will be held throughout the Bay Area in the new year, she said. She was also invited to do a presentation on the project to the California Arts Council regional meeting in January.

The book, which grew out of Alancraig's writing classes at the Albany Senior Center, includes 68 poems and short prose pieces, culled from 160 submissions. But the project's true birth, according to Alancraig, was in the minds of two of her students, Iva Jex and Vernon F. Larsen.

"They suggested that we put together a book," she recalled, "and I thought it was a great idea."

The result, she said, is unique on two accounts: "this is the only anthology, at least in this state, that includes the writings of both older and younger people. And it's unique because of the involvement of so many community agencies."

These agencies include the Albany Senior Center, the California Arts Council, the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts, Educators Improvement Service, Emeritus Enterprises, Older Adult Resource Center and Vista College.

How these diverse agencies came to be involved in Across the Generations is almost as interesting a story as the tales in the anthology.

As a teacher at Vista College, Alancraig brought in two of her colleagues — Christopher Miller and Mark Greenside — to serve on the board of editors. The fourth editor was Fred Setterberg of the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts.

She had received funding from the CAC to serve as an artist-in-residence at the senior center, which meant doing readings and workshops as well as soliciting material for the planned anthology.

Looking at racial balance

as the Eastern Orthodox churches centered in Eastern Mediterranean lands.

Always more meaning and symbol-oriented than the churches in other lands, this feast commemorated for them that point in time when God took human flesh and manifested ("epiphanized") himself in the person of Jesus. The essential meaning is that God's will alone is the source of Jesus' origins, that the whole creation is focused on the event (the star) and that it is for all men at all times (not just for the Jews — the Magi were gentiles).

The scriptural story is about the star and the visit of the wise astrologers — even they come to worship and give to him who was sent for all humankind. Don't try to literalize these details or tie them down to recorded history — no one has ever been able to do it. It's also beside the point, for the inspired author is using sublime poetry and picture language to express meaning that no ordinary words could do.

The feast of Christmas and its following season of 12 days carries with it much of the same meaning as Epiphany, but there are some differences, and it originated in different lands where thought patterns were different. To combat an early false teaching about Jesus ("dotetism") that he was really solely God and only seemed to be a human person, the more historically and literally minded churches in "the West" (North Africa, Italy, Northern and Western Europe) got particularly interested in the details of Jesus' origins. Thus came the stories of the Annunciation, conception, John Baptist, birth, (Jewish) shepherds and the manger at the inn.

Even though these stories are from a more literal and historical time and place than the Eastern Epiphany stories, once again we make an impossible and unproductive task for ourselves if we try to uphold or refute details by our own historical, literal and scientific standards. No, we must allow the authors to speak to us of history and meaning that only picture language can express. And who could do better than use these accounts to say that the origin of Jesus was none other than in God himself, that he was sent to us as a fully human person, and that his coming was of cosmic (angelic) implications.

Thus Christmas and Epiphany are in many ways "twin feasts," with much of the same meaning, yet each expressed in the thought patterns of its age and location. Their dates, which no one pretends to be accurate, were consciously chosen to compete with pagan festivals (Jan. 6 for Epiphany in the East and Dec. 25 for Christmas in the West). Each story —

Magi and Star for Epiphany, and Shepherds and Angels for Christmas, contributes its rich symbols and eternal meaning from age to age.

In the interchange of Christian observances in the first few centuries following Jesus' time, the Eastern churches added the Western Christmas, while keeping their own Epiphany as primary. The same was true in the Western churches: they added Epiphany and its stories while keeping their own Christmas and its story as primary.

And this process of expanding observances has continued ever since, both from religious and non-religious sources. The evergreens, snow and St. Nicholas (Santa Claus) of Northern Europe are probably the most observed, but most cultures have added ones that are meaningful to their own time and place. After all, Christmas cards originated in our culture in just the last century.

Massive gift-giving has made the weeks before Christmas more important than the "proper" season of the 12 days following. The pre-Christmas four-week season of Advent has become essentially a long preparation for the Feast. And in this season retail merchants, instead of pricing goods at their highest value, now provide us with some of the best bargain sales of the year!

Who solicits funds in Albany

Sensing that the time was ripe for a policy discussion, Vice Mayor William Johns remarked that the council had managed to handle such applications in the past without a "rigid and fast policy." As long as there is no sudden flood of applications, he said, each case can be left to the discretion of the council.

Johns said that granting the Citizens for a Better Environment a permit for six weeks posed no problems because only that group and the Berkeley Women's Center planned to solicit in January; but that since the council cannot predict how many applications it will have in later months, it would be unwise to grant the Women's Center a permit extending beyond January.

The 30-day rule evolved as a way to monitor fundraising activity, according to City Attorney Robert Zweben.

Asked whether the council had any legal right to accept some applications while rejecting others if an excess came in, Zweben said the city ought to be able to avoid such a situation.

"My initial suggestion would be to have the city administrator contact the organizations and arrange a solicitors' schedule, without getting into an adversarial position," he said.

County vies for Medi-Cal

By NORMAN COLBY

While the state is attempting to cut spiraling Medi-Cal costs through competitive bidding between hospitals, Contra Costa County has developed an innovative plan of its own that could leave some local hospitals out of the money.

"The Board of Supervisors seeks to control health care, and not be at the whim of the state," said Robert Kaplan, county health plan administrator.

"If our proposal is approved," Kaplan said, "this county would become the exclusive Medi-Cal contractor here under a master contract. There would be less outside interference under the new setup."

The proposal would allow the county to subcontract Medi-Cal services to local hospitals, which would be chosen by the same competitive bidding system now being tested by the state.

Hospitals selected in the bidding would have a monopoly on Medi-Cal business in their areas. Those hospitals not selected would lose all their current Medi-Cal business, a financial blow that could deeply hurt two West County medical facilities.

County Health Services Director Arnold Left plans to submit the proposal to the state by early January. Approval must come from state and federal levels.

The Legislature paved the way for the county's plan this summer when it authorized the competitive bidding system in hopes of reducing the burgeoning $5 billion state Medi-Cal program to manageable size by forcing hospitals to cut costs.

Locally, West County hospital officials are trying to familiarize themselves with the possible changes on their operations that could result from the new system.

Brookside Hospital spokesman Fraser Felter said that facility's board of directors was meeting to review possibilities if the county obtains a master contract from the state or fails in the attempt.

"In any event, we would be faced with submitting a bid for a Medi-Cal contract," Felter said.

Nearly half of Contra Costa's 50,000 Medi-Cal recipients live in the West County, which contains only a third of the county's population.

Four hospitals serve the West County — Brookside in San Pablo, Doctors Hospital in Pinole, and Kaiser and Richmond hospitals in Richmond.

Because the County Hospital is located in Martinez, Kaplan said it is likely that "one or two" West County hospitals will be chosen to provide Medi-Cal services. "The County Hospital cannot handle the entire load," he said.

Criteria being considered for selection include low bids, quality of services and easy access for the poor, he said.

Local hospitals have a varying degree of dependency on Medi-Cal business.

About 40 percent of Richmond Hospital's patients use Medi-Cal. At Brookside the figure is about 15 percent, at Doctors less than 5 percent, and at Kaiser, which serves mainly its own members, it is negligible.

Under the traditional system, a Medi-Cal recipient was able to choose any hospital or physician he desired and the state paid the cost.

The competitive bidding system established a number of Medi-Cal "regions" in the state. In each region several hospitals would become the exclusive providers of Medi-Cal care.

In San Francisco, for example, nine hospitals were recently chosen by the state as providers.

Other regions include Alameda County, San Diego, Los Angeles and Orange County.

State Medi-Cal director William Guy is expected to select about 150 more hospitals within a few weeks. This means about 400 other hospitals will be excluded statewide from treating Medi-Cal patients except in emergencies.

Competing hospitals must submit bids in the form of an all-inclusive daily rate, applied regardless of the types of treatment or surgical procedure.

Opponents to this system argue that competitive bidding will mean a return to "two tier" hospital care, with Medi-Cal patients being on the lower tier. Local hospital representatives have no comment on that. State authorities deny it. Leff's proposal to replace the state with the county in Contra Costa as the contractor of medical services is considered a potential "pilot project" by other counties, according to county health official Kaplan.

"Regionalization" of Contra Costa County is being held in limbo by the state pending the outcome of Leff's application.

"Our county is ahead of other counties in this kind of thing," Kaplan said, citing Contra Costa's existing health maintenance organization that provides for county employees, private individuals and "medically indigent adults."

The county has about 11,000 members in its health plan, including about 5,000 medically indigent adults who were recently added to the rolls.

Brookside Hospital is likely to submit a bid to continue its Medi-Cal services, said Felter, who declined to estimate the financial impact on the hospital if it lost all Medi-Cal business.

Richmond Hospital administrator George Wacker said the 23rd Street facility will submit a bid. Failure to obtain a Medi-Cal contract could trigger a crisis at the hospital because of its large percentage of Medi-Cal patients, Wacker admitted.

"We already have a contract with the county under its present Key Plan that includes county employees," he said. "This and our good geographical location for serving low-income people leaves us optimistic."

Even with a Medi-Cal contract, the financial situation is not rosy, Wacker said, because the hospital receives 69 cents on the dollar for each Medi-Cal patient as reimbursement by the state.

Doctors Hospital administrator John Rinsnet said loss of Medi-Cal contract would not have a heavy impact upon the hospital because there is less than 5 percent such patients there.

percent. Two schools, King and Peres, reported no white students.

The highest percentage of blacks were at Coronado with 94 percent; King with 96 percent; Nystrom with 95 percent; Peres with 93 percent; end, and Stege with 93 percent.

Hispanics had the highest representation at Belding, 32 percent; Cortez, 40 percent; Dover, 33 percent; and Lincoln, 43 percent. Asians were highly represented at three schools: Balboa, 26 percent; Castro, 25 percent, and El Portal, 22 percent.

Filipinos, a small group overall, were surprisingly strong at Hercules and Ohlone Schools, 26 percent and 32 percent, respectively.

Some schools in the district are racially well-balanced and reflect the profile of the district at large. Among them are Bayview with 30 percent white, 37 percent black, 14 percent Hispanic, 8 percent Asian, and 9 percent Filipino; and Ford with 38 percent white, 48 percent black, 10 percent Hispanic, 3 percent Asian, and one percent Filipino.

Others that roughly reflect the district's balance are Grant with 33 percent white, 42 percent black, 18 percent Hispanic, 3 percent Asian, and 2 percent Filipino; and Washington with 42 percent white, 36 percent black; 12 percent Hispanic, 1 percent Asian and 6 percent Filipino.

Other schools, however, such as those with black or white populations in excess of 80 percent, are lacking in racial balance.

The racial populations of the schools in the district does not always reflect the neighborhood where they are located because some students attend on intradistrict permits for transfers, often because of babysitting.

Since 1969 Richmond also had a voluntary program, and 1,434 students have transferred since then, a nearly equal number in secondary and elementary schools. Students on these permits are allowed to transfer if the transfer improves the racial balance of the receiving school.

This year the highest elementary transfer in the district was to Del Mar, 20 students; 40 students; and Washington with 15 students and 20 other schools had fewer.

Among the secondary schools, the greatest number of transfers this year were to Del Mar, 20 students; 40 students; and Washington with 15 students and 20 other schools had fewer.

Mail bag

She backs the MX

The United States has a need for the MX missile. This need is in response to the Soviet threat, a threat which is ideological, military and nuclear. For many years we have avoided a nuclear war with the Soviets by following a policy of "peace through strength", a policy of nuclear deterrence. That seems like a better policy than matching Soviet strength by American weakness, as the "ban-the-bomber," the unilateral disarmers and the leftists would like the U.S. to do!

U.S. nuclear deterrence is based on a triad of defense, made up of Minutemen missiles in the ground, B22 bombers, and submarines.

1. President Reagan has explained that our Minutemen are 15 years old, and they have become vulnerable to the newer, more powerful and more accurate Soviet missiles. The Soviet Union has 388 mobile SS 20 missiles, deployed in 1977, with a range of 3,000 miles, covering all of Western Europe, to none for the West. The Soviets have 308 giant SS 18 intercontinental missiles, capable of knocking out our Minutemen in the ground. They also have more than 200 new SS 16s, deployed 982, the world's first mobile ICMs — well camouflaged.

2. The Soviets have in action their new Backfire bomber, with a range of 5,500 miles. We designed our new bomber, the B-1, but we never deployed it. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger says that within two years Soviet technology will have neutralized our old WWII B 22 bombers, leaving us with only the third leg of the triad.

3. Submarines don't have the accuracy to destroy Soviet missiles in the ground. Without the other two legs of our triad, our submarines could be in future danger by a sudden breakthrough in Soviet technology.

All of this explains why we need the MX, which is a large missile with the capacity to destroy the big Soviet missiles in the ground.

Americans developed the missile technology. With the help of an estimated 5,000 Soviet spies in this country the Soviets copied or stole the technology. While the Americans spent years haggling over whether to build the mobile missile or not and where to put it, the Soviets built and installed theirs.

The "dense pack" plan is to put 100 MX missiles in Wyoming in a strip of land about one mile wide and ten miles long. Dr. Edward Teller, one of the world's greatest scientists, says that he knows of a system — I assume it's a laser system — that will knock down virtually all incoming Soviet missiles before they could reach our shores. It might work well with the "dense pack." Secretary Weinberger says, "We're looking at an anti-ballistic missile system."

When our Minutemen were first made available, they were dispersed widely over perhaps 600 miles in Wyoming. Now that Soviet accuracy has improved, they can hit those Minutemen as long as they are dispersed, and so the strategic advantage of dispersed Minutemen is gone.

Those members of Congress who oppose the "dense pack" should propose an alternate method of dispersing them. There has been too much talk of MX already.

Shock therapy violates rights

The MHA (Mental Health Association) has been years blocked mental patients from obtaining their rights. This nationwide organization serves the groups who make a lot of money from the mental health system such as psychiatrists, drug companies, and hospitals. The Alameda County MHA showed its true colors in November's election by allowing its members to vote against Berkeley's Measure T, which outlawed shock treatments.

Measure T received 61 percent of the vote. The fact that opponents spent 10 times as much money as proponents. Almost all of the anti-T money came from psychiatric associations and Herrick Hospital, a psychiatric hospital that has been a major force in the county's electroshock treatments.

Berkeley voters were swayed by the MHA's arguments: shock is still given against people's wishes; recipients are not fully informed as to possible side effects and long-term memory loss; free choice of treatment; mental hospitals where people are held against their will; and forced drug treatment; 70 percent of shock treatments are given to women; and California's state government has been on mental health matters, CAC (Citizens Against Compulsory Care), called for a statewide halt to shock treatments. Law on shock is not being enforced.

The MHA promotes the "right to treatment" and includes the "right" to be treated against one's will. Never complain about any kind of psychiatric treatment. The MHA has received money from Glaxo, a pharmaceutical company, for its shock treatments. It was sued for up to $7.8 million in a death and injury lawsuit.

United Way gives hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly to Bay Area MHA chapters and has been for many years. Meanwhile, none of the services provided in the United States who are suffering from mental illness such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, and major depressive disorder, have ever received a penny from United Way.

The tasty treasures of the Chinese kitchen

Two new books from a prolific local author

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

EL CERRITO — Chinese cooking expert Jennie Low is as proficient at the typewriter as she is behind the stove. The prolific El Cerrito teacher and writer has two new books in print: The Flavor of Chinatown, written with St. Pierre (Chronicle Books, $5.95) and Jennie's Szechuan Cookbook (Presidio Press, $7.95).

Despite the popularity of Chinese cooking (and Low has been teaching people how to do it for 16 years), many have trouble getting the ingredients they need, she had, however, never written a guide before she was asked by the publisher to collaborate with St. Pierre, a writer who authored The Flavor of North Beach. It out to be a match made — if not in heaven — in the many treks around Chinatown, the two became friends. "He loves Chinese food," Low said. "If he choice between Chinese or American food, he'd pick Chinese."

People are afraid to shop in Chinatown," Low said. "I had a good one-day trip, and you get the best bargains in Chinatown once a week in Chinatown for 24

That's an important qualification for a writer of a guide to Chinese food, The Flavor of Chinatown includes restaurants, dim sum, food shops and bakeries, as tips on tea, a glossary of Chinese foods and 21

Low is currently offering classes at the Berkeley School, the College of Marin and the El Cerrito Community Center. She teaches her students how to shop

Chinatown, both for value and for atmosphere. She said, for example, that restaurants in Chinatown are a good bargain: "when you order beef and bok choy there is more beef in it." And she has high praise as the quality of cooking, noting that the best chefs remain in Chinatown because it is close to choosing the recipes for The Flavor of Chinatown, she wanted to provide a diversity of styles that were not dictated for the novice. She says that the recipe for spare ribs is very easy.

Writers Jennie Low and Brian St. Pierre collaborated on The Flavor of Chinatown.

"My cousin served that to me in Hong Kong two years ago, and I worked out this recipe from that. I did change it a little; I put in garlic and green onions," she said.

The new Szechuan cookbook took her a year to do. "I watched other people play on the weekend. I stayed home to write."

Each recipe is presented in careful steps. Low also describes how much of the dish can be made in advance — "some people think that Chinese cooking is all done at the last minute" — and what substitutions can be made.

The book's glossary of ingredients not only describes their uses, but also gives storage advice and shows the Chinese characters, in order to help shoppers in an unfamiliar store.

The tricks and techniques were developed not only in Low's kitchen, but also in her classroom. She also learned from her experience in doing her first book, Chopsticks, Cleaver and Wok, which she self-published in 1974, and which is now in its sixth printing.

"The step-by-step technique may waste paper, but my students appreciate it. I don't tell them how to do things, I show them," she said.

Her courses stress home-style cooking, and Low wants people to know what a dish is supposed to taste like. So, although she knows that people can fix a shortcut Mo Shu Pork using flour tortillas, she will teach them how to make the authentic pancakes.

"That's my duty," she says.

It also appears to be her pleasure, for Low said that even though she might become a millionaire someday, she would hate to stop teaching. Now she dreams of a restaurant — "with a good atmosphere, good food and good service" — the kind of place her students can come to when she eventually retires from teaching.

Low was certainly not brought up to expect a career in food-preparation. A native of Hong Kong, Low was sent to America to study. She spoke little English and knew less about cooking.

"My mother sent me here to go to school and make lots of money. I'm still working on that," she said with a smile.

She appreciates what she called "the good life" that she has built for herself in the United States. "You take it for granted until you go on a trip and see other places," she said.

Low herself grew up in a privileged environment. "When I was a child, we had servants. I was in big trouble when I got married," she recalled with a laugh.

She started learning how to cook, and she still cooks for her family, which includes two grown daughters.

"We eat a lot of vegetables. We don't eat so much meat. I eat two bowls of rice every night, and I am still under 99 pounds," she said.

Food is not only her business, but her recreation as well. She enjoys eating out — in Chinatown — with family and friends.

"When a big family or friends get together, the favorite topic is eating," she said.

That's a big interest of her cooking students as well. For the past several years, Low has led an annual tour of China. The tours feature visits to cultural and historical sites; "when my students go on the tour, we still talk about food."

When happiness is a hot wok

Jennie's Spare Ribs

(serves 5)

- 2 lb. pork spareribs
- 2 qt. water
- 1 tbsp. oil
- 2 tsp. finely chopped garlic
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 2 tbsp. white wine
- 2 1/2 tbsp. white vinegar or cider vinegar
- 3 tbsp. sugar
- 4 tbsp. dark or thin soy sauce
- 2 green onions, finely chopped

1. Have your butcher cut spareribs into strips 1 1/2 inches wide. Cut rib bones apart; trim off fat.
2. Bring 2 qt. water to a boil. Parboil meat for 3 minutes. Drain well.
3. Heat wok (or saucepan). Add oil, garlic, and spareribs. Stir-fry for 3 minutes over high heat. Add 1/2 cup cold water, white wine, vinegar, sugar and soy sauce. Bring to a fast boil. Reduce to medium heat. Cover and cook for 40 minutes. (Check liquid occasionally. Add more water if necessary.)
4. Remove to a platter (including liquid). Garnish with green onions. Serve.

Advance preparation: The entire recipe may be prepared in advanced and refrigerated. It keeps well for several days. It may be kept warm in a covered casserole in a low oven for up to an hour.

Serving suggestion: This dish goes well with steamed rice. (The juice is very tasty.)

Variation: Substitute raw chicken parts. Leave thighs and drumsticks whole; cut whole breast into 6 equal parts. Omit the parboiling. Beef ribs cut into 2-inch pieces are also delicious cooked this way (without parboiling). Cooking time remains the same for both variations.

Broccoli in oyster sauce

- 1 bunch broccoli (about 1 1/4 lb.)
- 3 1/2 tbsp. oil
- 1 1/2 quart water
- 2 1/2 tbsp. oyster sauce

1. Peel off tough outer covering from broccoli stems. Cut stems and flowerettes diagonally into 1 1/2-inch pieces.
2. Place 3 1/2 tbsp. oil in a small saucepan. Set aside.
3. Bring 1 1/2 quart water to a boil. Add broccoli and cook, uncovered, for 2 minutes over high heat. (Start timing immediately. Do not wait until water returns to a boil.) Drain.
4. While broccoli is draining, heat oil for 1 minute over high heat. Place broccoli in a shallow dish and immediately pour hot oil over it. (Oil should be so hot that it sizzles when poured over vegetable.)
5. Pour oyster sauce over broccoli. Mix well and serve immediately.

Advance preparation: Steps 1 and 2 may be done a few hours in advance. Keep at room temperature.

Variation: Try zucchini, Swiss chard, bok choy, asparagus, cabbage, or Napa cabbage prepared this way. They all require the same cooking time.

Frank Bianchi, a teacher at El Cerrito's Del Mar School, said he wanted to "make a test of Reaganomics," to get private businesses to donate to public education. He showed students in his sixth grade class how to make lamps from driftwood he found at the beach, and asked local merchants for donated parts. Blind love: a girl & her dog

By JIM SANDERS

Christy Leard is raising a puppy she can't keep for a person she doesn't know.

Leard, 17, dreads the day she must bid farewell to the lovable 56-pound golden retriever that has become her best friend.

But the El Cerrito High School senior has known the sad day would come since she joined a Pinole 4-H program to train guide dogs for the blind.

"It's gonna be a tear-jerker," Leard said, petting the long tan fur of her playful puppy, Rio. "Giving her up will be the hardest part. You have fun for a year and a half, and then the dog has to leave."

Leard, a blonde, blue-eyed animal lover, wore a green t-shirt inscribed, "Happiness is a Guide Dog Puppy."

The words are true, she says.

Leard accepted Rio in February and the two have become inseparable. They take walks together. Attend meetings together. Sleep in the same room. Travel in the same car.

"The advantage of this program is that I get to have another puppy around," Leard said with a smile. "You have something to give your love to. You can watch the dog grow up — it's like having your own kid."

Rio legally belongs to San Rafael's Guide Dogs for the Blind school, which will provide the final, intensive training before the dog is given away to a blind master next year.

Leard is preparing herself already.

"At graduation, I'll get to present the dog to the blind person," she says. "I'm just wondering how Rio will act. Is she gonna behave and calm down, or be a spastic puppy?"

The question remains unanswered as Rio ambles across the Leards' living room. Like most puppies, the dog's feet are a little too big and it moves clumsily.

"When my friends hear about this program, they just kind of go, 'Wow, you're doing something neat,'" she said. "The most common question I get is, 'How can you give her up?' Then they say, 'I could never do that.'"

Twice each month, Leard takes Rio to meetings in Walnut Creek, where other "puppy raisers" discuss their problems and practice teaching techniques under the watchful eye of trainer Bob Leffmann.

Participants in the guide dog program are responsible for teaching their puppies basic obedience: coming, sitting, staying, heeling, fetching and lying down.

Erica Allen, countywide program coordinator, said Leard is "doing a fantastic job" and that Rio was one of the best-trained golden retrievers.

If Rio fails to perform adequately as a guide dog, the Leards will have an opportunity to keep the dog. Four of every 10 puppies pass the rigid training.

Christy teaches Rio by taking the puppy to places with many people and many noises. The two have walked through grocery stores, churches and banks. They ride cable cars, buses and have visited San Francisco's Pier 39 and the UC-retrievers at a recent field day for Northern California guide dog puppies.

"It takes patience, firmness and kindness," Allen said. "It's a combination of things. (Leard) and that dog just seemed to hit it off from the start."

There are 14 puppy raisers throughout Contra Costa County. Allen claims there are more prospective golden retriever, German shepherd and labrador guide dog puppies than there are 4-H members willing to raise them.

"Yeah, there are more dogs than kids," Allen says.

"Many parents feel it's too difficult to give the dog back after 16 months. They feel it's so traumatic that they don't want their children to go through that."

Leard is the daughter of Bill and Kathy Leard, who applaud the unique 4-H program and call Rio's training a "family effort."

"I think all of us get attached to her," Bill Leard says. "She's just another member of the family. We all feed, brush, comb and walk her. This is a family project — many hands make it a lot easier."

Berkeley campus.

Rio must be taught not to flee at the sound of popping balloons, vacuum cleaners, hair dryers, air horns, engine noises or firecrackers.

"You have to make sure your dog doesn't spook, because a blind person can't see a distraction," Leard explains. "If a cat ran down the street and a guide dog went after it, the blind person could fall down in the street."

Often, Leard imagines herself blind. She makes Rio her eyes. She makes Rio her guide dog. She makes Rio her best friend.

When traveling on the carpeted floor, she makes Rio her eyes. She makes Rio her guide dog. She makes Rio her best friend.

Consumers: here's how to fight back

The car is still shiny and has that new smell, but the transmission is shot. Or you've had the repairman three times for the dryer, and your clothes are still coming out wet. You're mad. You want somebody to do something about your problem.

Reach for the Consumer's Resource Handbook. Published by the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, the Handbook has information on how to prepare your initial complaint, deal with the manufacturer, or get help from the government. It can also help you find and use the new consumer arbitration panels that are being established around the country.

In addition, it lists addresses and telephone numbers for federal, state, and local government consumer offices, for Better Business Bureaus, and for more than 400 corporations that have officials designated to help consumers settle complaints.

For your free copy of the Consumer's Resource Handbook, send your name and address on a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 579L, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Celebrating their first wedding anniversary with a trip to Carmel were El Cerrito residents Manuel and Jan Gonsalves. They stayed at the elegant Gossby House in Pacific Grove and enjoyed sightseeing around Carmel and Pebble Beach.

Women — interested in singing four-part harmony, barbershop-style with a weekly group? If so, Harmony Bay Chapter of the Sweet Adelines is welcoming new members. Harmony Chapter is one of the 700 chapters of the international Sweet Adelines. The Harmony Chapter boasts 30 members from West Contra Costa and other parts of the Bay Area. They meet Wednesday nights at 7:30 p.m. at First Congregational Church in Berkeley.

Among the activities of the Sweet Adelines are a Northern California regional convention in which they compete each spring, and various other paid and benefit performances throughout the year. On the group's December agenda are performances at Hilltop Mall, Herrick Hospital and a performance for the Oakland Women's Professional Association.

The only requirement for prospective members is an enjoyment of singing and the ability to work at it. For more information on membership, or to schedule a performance call Deanna at 525-1196 or Carol at 526-6160.

El Cerrito residents Merve and Dottie Magidson recently returned from a two-month motor home tour of the United States. The Magidsons toured 31 states, sightseeing in such places as New York, Washington D.C., Nashville, Philadelphia, Chicago, Las Vegas, and Mexico. Among their favorite places visited were the Smithsonian Institute, Mt. Rushmore, historic Arlington Cemetery, the Grand Ole Opry and attending a college football game at the Astrodome. The Magidsons also visited their daughter and son-in-law John and Ilene Marshall in Houston for two weeks and various other relatives in Baltimore before they returned home.

I can always use more information for my column. Please don't hesitate to call and tell me about your weddings, engagements, vacations, houseguests and other social activities. I can be reached at 527-1592.

Robert and Brenda Resch Hansen

B. Resch is bride of R. Hansen

ALBANY — Brenda Resch of El Sobrante became the bride of Robert Hansen of Albany in a recent ceremony.

The bride wore an ivory wedding gown trimmed in ruffled chantilly lace and multi-ruffled hemline with attached chapel train.

Maid of honor was Beverly Resch; other attendants were Kate Hansen and Magi Hansen, the bridegroom's sisters. Attending the bridegroom were Jim Hansen, Ronald Delatorre, and Joe Pingueo. Ring bearer was Michael Hansen.

Following a reception at Maple Hall in San Pablo, the couple took a wedding trip to New Mexico and Arizona. They now live in El Sobrante.

The bride graduated from DeAnza High School and is employed at JC Penney's in the Hilltop Mall. Her husband graduated from Albany High School and is employed at Marriott Hotel, Berkeley.

YMCA plans holiday fete

ALBANY — The Albany YMCA will sponsor its annual Christmas party on Sunday, Dec. 19 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the YMCA, 221 Kains Ave.

The party will feature games, storytelling, candy canes, Santa Claus, refreshments, and rides on the old Albany fire truck. There is no cost, and all ages are invited.

Rides on the fire truck will begin at 2 p.m. and go from Albany Village to the YMCA. For further information please call the YMCA at 525-1130.

Studying artillery

EL CERRITO — Pvt. Derek K. Mobley, son of O.D.P. Mobley, El Cerrito, and Arthanel G. Lites of San Francisco, has completed training as a cannoneer under the one station unit training program at the U.S. Army Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

Students learned the duties of a howitzer or gun section crewman and received instruction in handling ammunition, setting fuses and preparing charges, communications and maintenance.

Visiting the lonely

LITA (Love Is The Answer) is seeking volunteers to serve as special one-to-one friends with lonely people in West Contra Costa County nursing homes.

To learn more about LITA, call 527-2055.

To make a tax-deductible donation, send your check to LITA of Contra Costa, 6830 Stockton Avenue, El Cerrito, CA 94530.

Exercise for small fry

ALBANY — The Albany YMCA offers a basic movement education and exploration program for infants, toddlers, preschoolers and their parents.

There are both morning and evening classes, for children nine months to five years. Classes begin Jan. 3.

Seim-Bassier rites celebrated

EL CERRITO — Marcia Lyne Seim, daughter of Charles and Janet Seim of El Cerrito, was married recently to Wayne Paul Boassier of Little Rock, Ark.

At the ceremony at First Congregational Church of Berkeley, the bride was given away by her father and grandfather. She wore a white ruffled dress with blue lace trim, and carried pink roses.

Laurel Bowden was matron of honor; Sharon Seim, the bridesmaid. Best man was Mike Mitchell; usher, Mark Seim.

After a wedding trip to Yosemite, the couple lives in Richmond. The bride is a graduate of UC San Diego. She is employed at the Gap Stores Inc.

Her husband graduated in architecture from Louisiana State University and is currently working for MacKinlay, Winnacker, McNeil and Associates, an architectural firm in Oakland.

This local anthology crosses the generations

The organizers sought foundation funding, but ran into a wall of rejections: "with funding the way it is, foundations are giving money to direct services," Alancraig said. That meant looking for money elsewhere. Printing in other places eventually found an anonymous donor, who lent the project $400. Alancraig expects all 500 copies to be sold and the loan repaid by early 1983. To order a copy, send $6.95 plus $4.55 sales tax, for a total of $11.50 per book, to Across the Generations, P.O. Box 6368, Albany 94706. Make checks payable to Writing Project, Educators Improvement Service. Include $1.10 for mailing costs or call 525-4856 to arrange for pick-up.) Alancraig said that finding money was the hardest part of the project — but choosing the selections ran a close second. "We did it in an agonizing kind of way," Alancraig admitted. "We divided up the material and we divided it into 'yes,' 'no' and 'maybe' piles." All four editors had to read and agree to all the "yes" and "no" votes, she said. Then they repeated the process on the

"maybes." She's not sure yet what format will be used with the second volume. "I think we're going to explore the differences among senior citizens. Everyone over 65 is a senior citizen, but they are not all alike," she said. "For example, I've noticed that there's a real difference between people born before and after World War I. They have a different outlook, a different world view." Since the editors wished readers to confront their own feelings and prejudices about aging, they included the age of each writer as part of the byline in the current edition. Alancraig said this was not a universally approved decision. "I heard from one woman who was upset because we listed her as four years older than she is. And another woman was upset because she is really 80, and we said she was 78," she said. Not all the criticism was based on specific age errors. One contributor objected to listing the age at the top of the page, believing that this helped to predetermine the reader's response to the piece. Alancraig acknowledged that not all the selections are of equal literary merit.

"One of our concerns was that we wanted to give people access to print, people who don't usually have that," she explained. As a result, the book includes several submissions from elderly residents of convalescent hospitals who dictated their remembrances to Vista College instructor Christopher Miller. There are also a number of stories by children, include three from nine-year-olds. "The students in a fourth-grade class submitted material, and we chose three pieces," Alancraig said. "It turned out that one of them was written by a child who was a slow learner. I heard from his teacher that this was a big boost for his self-confidence, to have his piece selected when most of the others in the class were turned down." Alancraig loves hearing stories about how thrilled people are with the publication of the book. She said that the oldest contributor, a 98-year-old blind man who lives in a convalescent hospital, just held onto his copy of the book, stroking it and glowing. "Now that the book is out, more and more people are expressing interest in it," she said. "All of my work here (teaching) has been to get people to stop saying they haven't done anything interesting in their lives. The book has helped that change, and the readings will help too, to get them up on stage."

Poetry sampler from young & old

The following poems are from Across the Generations.

Baptizing

by Fannie Mae Scott

When I was a little girl,
the same place we fished in, we made a baptizing pool.
And every Sunday we'd have a baptizing until they baptized me.
When they baptized me, they strangled me.
They put me in so deep until the water went up my nose and I couldn't get my breath.
And that's why I was strangled.
It broke up the baptizing. They shook me and I spit that water up.
But we never did tell our mothers about it.

(Scott is 81)

Swimmers

by Betty Coon

Old men surrender to the water slowly easing weak muscles and stiff joints.
While the young churn through laps,
they paddle and float.
They have given over achievement.

They lie on their backs and dream.
They are brittle boats waiting to break up, learning to dissolve to the first element.
(Coon is 34)

Drivers sought to aid meal service to elders

Berkeley's Portable Meals Program needs volunteer drivers.

The portable meals program provides a hot, nutritious meal and visit to homebound seniors five days a week. Many older adults who otherwise would have to be hospitalized are able to remain in their homes with the help of this service.

During November 2115 meals were delivered to seniors; 205 more meals were requested but not delivered due to lack of drivers. A car is necessary and reimbursement for mileage is supplied if requested.

Volunteers may drive one day a week, once or twice a month, or on a substitute basis to suit their schedule. Call the acting coordinator, Leola Polk, at 848-0347.

A Yule helping hand

The Salvation Army is cooperating with the West County Volunteer Bureau-sponsored Christmas Clearing House in order to avoid duplication of services and to help more families in need this holiday season.

Other agencies in support of the Clearing House are the San Pablo and Richmond police, the San Pablo Toy Shop, the Carquinez Coalition, the American Red Cross, the Richmond Rescue Mission, North Richmond Neighborhood House, the St. Vincent DePaul Society, the Contra Costa Girls Club, Contra Costa Social Services and the Rodeo Community Center.

Other groups planning to help others this Christmas should contact Merl Kerns at 237-9788.

Albany Library sets holiday programs

ALBANY — The Albany Library will celebrate the holiday season with three programs for children.

Evening story time for ages 3 through 7 will be given on Tuesday, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 28. The program lasts approximately 35 minutes and will include stories, picture book reading and simple singing and stretch activities. Children are invited to wear pajamas to the program.

For school-age children, two stories a day are scheduled for 3:30 p.m. each afternoon, through Dec. 30.

On Tuesday, Dec. 21, at 7:30 p.m., a special holiday program for children will be presented. A puppet show, "Arthur's Christmas Cookies," will be featured. Refreshments will be provided by the Friends of the Albany Library, Inc.

Learn to pump iron

ALBANY — A class in physical conditioning with weights for men and women will be offered again by the Albany Adult School beginning Tuesday, Jan. 4, at 7 p.m.

The class, taught by Marty Halpern, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8 p.m. at Albany High School, 603 Key Route Blvd., for 10 weeks. Cost: $24.

To register or obtain more information, call 526-6811 or 525-7131.

Holiday fire safety

ALBANY — The public is invited to a program on fire safety for holidays taking place at the Albany Senior Center, 846 Masonic Ave., on Tuesday, Dec. 14, at 2 p.m.

Dennis Rivers of the fire department will talk and demonstrate safety equipment for home, office and car. There will be a question and answer period.

Rivers says more fires occur in homes at this time of the year than any other.

Holiday care for kids

The Berkeley-Albany YMCA is sponsoring holiday care for children of working parents. "Holly Days" is a full day program for children ages 5-12 which will operate Dec. 20-23 and Dec. 27-30.

The hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. with supervised play from 8-9 a.m. and 5-6 p.m.

Activities include surprise field trips, matinee day, Rudolph's nose party, ice skating party, and crazy olympics. A special snow trip to Leland Meadows Resort near Pincrest is scheduled for Dec. 23.

Programs will be conducted in Berkeley and Albany. The registration deadline is Dec. 15. The cost for each day ranges from $14 to $24.

For more information call 525-1130.

LHS sponsors trips visit elephant seals

Lawrence Hall of Science is sponsoring a chartered trip to the breeding ground of northern elephant seals, on Sunday, Jan. 9.

The trip features a 2 1/2 hour tour over three miles of coastline. At this time — the breeding season — males, females, and pups are all present in the breeding area.

Other visible species will be the stellar sea lion, the California sea lion, and the harbor seal.

The cost for the trip is $18 ($15 for LHS members). The trip will be at the North Berkeley Bart station at 6:15 a.m. with the return scheduled for 2:15 p.m. Participants will bring picnic lunches and be prepared for any weather.

For more information and a reservation form, call the Lawrence Hall of Science at 642-5132.

Media award application due Feb. 3

The Lawrence Hall of Science is sponsoring its 11th annual media award at the meeting Feb. 3.

The award will honor outstanding media efforts in the field of science, with the issues of conservation, abortion, education, teen pregnancy or other planning and reproductive health concerns.

A person committee of Planned Parenthood and two representatives of the journalism or communications profession will select the winner from those who enter the awards.

Those interested in nominating someone or media efforts in entering the competition may submit a nomination from the Lawrence Hall of Science.

For more information, call 642-5132.

Deadline for entries is Jan. 15.

GENERAL CONSERVATION TIPS TO HELP YOU CONSERVE ENERGY

1. INSTALL CEILING INSULATION. Adequate insulation with thermal resistance will conserve heating and cooling and add to your comfort.
2. REDUCE DRAFTS by installing weatherstripping around windows and around outside doors.
3. KEEP DRAPES AND SHADES drawn on cloudy winter days and hot summer days and at night to reduce heat loss or heat gain through windows.
4. INSTALL SHADES on windows with southern and western exposures to reflect sunlight and make your home cooler.
5. CLOSE DAMPER when fireplace is not in use to prevent heat loss up the chimney.
6. KEEP WINDOWS CLOSED when heating or cooling your home.

Jacoby on Bridge

Against a five-diamond call you also bid normally with five hearts to show two aces, five spades to show three, etc.

Against very high interference your double merely tells partner you don't think you can make whatever you have to bid. Your pass suggests that he go on and any bid by you shows at least two aces.

West's jump to six clubs was desperation. He felt sure that if left to their own devices his opponents would find the right contract.

Since the Blackwood interference had been at the six level, North's pass merely showed that he was willing for his partner to bid six.

With a better hand that included another ace, North would have bid six himself to invite seven. With a less desirable hand that did not include both the king of diamonds and queen of spades, North would double to suggest that a slam contract would be undesirable.

The defense gave South a tough early problem. East overtook his partner's queen of clubs and led back the nine of hearts.

After long thought, South decided that East surely held the heart king and that diamonds would not break 3-2.

He gasped, took the finesse and lived happily ever after since it worked. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

How should you handle interference with your Blackwood? There are several ways, but the one we favor and use is called "DOPI," which is an acronym for "double with no aces pass with one ace."

You do not use this against an intervening five-club bid since you can still bid five diamonds to show one ace and so on.

High school honors S. Dryer

(The Albany High School Site Council's "Student Recognition Project" each month honors students whose contributions to the school or community have been previously unrecognized.)

These students have shown mature, independent thinking and acceptance of responsibility and have maintained at least a 2.0 grade point average. These articles are written by Lynn Halcomb, the Site Council's publications assistant.)

ALBANY — Sherri Dryer, a junior, has participated in sports since her freshman year, when she played junior varsity basketball. As a sophomore, she played junior varsity basketball and volleyball; this year she is on the varsity volleyball team.

Team sports are more appealing to her than individual sports because Dryer says she likes the excitement of working with others to achieve a common goal.

Dryer is a reporter and exchange editor for the high school newspaper, The Informer. She especially likes the autonomy and the individuality of being part of the newspaper staff, saying that she feels "it helps me be more responsible."

She recently attended a conference on earthquakes at Lawrence Hall of Science in Berkeley that led to an article in the school newspaper. She was the only representative of a student newspaper present.

Art is very important to her. She is now in her second year of advanced art, and after taking a calligraphy class in her freshman year, found she had a special aptitude for that exciting form. She now tries to schedule at least one art class a year. Dryer is also a service student, tutoring in general mathematics.

Dryer says sports not only keep her in shape, but also finds that working with others teaches her self-control and she is learning to be more supportive of others' efforts. She also says the friends she has made at Albany High are very important to her, helping her out when needed.

In her free time, she does babysitting, paints with water colors ("it helps me unwind") and is a member and past president of Rainbow Girls, a Masonic order.

Yule project: How you can help

The annual Christmas project for emotionally and mentally ill patients at state and local hospitals, rehabilitation centers, clients at board and care homes, and other institutes, is currently underway and sponsored by the Mental Health Association of Contra Costa County.

Christmas time, while a joyous season for so many, is often a lonely and bleak season for the mentally ill in the community. For 22 years the Mental Health Association has been able to help make the holidays a happier time for these often forgotten people.

Donations of pantyhose, night gowns, cosmetics, scarfs, shawls, gloves, sweaters, warm hats and new socks are suggested for women. For men, sport shirts (sizes 15 to 16), belts, ties, cigars, pipes, tobacco, socks, handkerchiefs, saving lotions, colognes, sweaters, and T-shirts are especially needed. Craft and hobby kits, playing cards, cribbage boards, games (chess, checkers, etc.), stationery/pens, paper back books (new), wallets, purses, toothpaste, tooth brushes, slippers (washable), combs brushes, mouthwash, shampoo, candy, fruit cakes, mince pies, decaffeinated coffees, and records and tapes of all kinds suggested.

Cash donations are needed to be used to shop for those gifts. Gifts are most in demand, particularly for men. Gifts are being collected at 1510 Second Ave., Walnut Creek, not wrap gifts, but do include tags.

The Association is a non-profit agency whose purpose is to provide services for the mentally ill. For more information, call 932-1500.

Create winter arrangements with flowers

Bulb flowers, imagination, and a few tricks of the trade are the three key ingredients that can transform a lover of flowers into a creator of floral art.

The time to let your creative juices flow is in winter, when the earth is dormant, but florist shops are filled with brilliantly colorful tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and irises.

The warmth of May will seem less distant, and the chill of winter less biting, when a room is decorated and perfumed by an arrangement created from spring blossoms.

The initial step, and the first "trick," is to select flowers that are still in the bud stage. Fully opened blooms will pass their prime too quickly.

Choose tulip buds whose colors are barely revealed. The florets of hyacinth should be tightly clustered and the palest of blue, pink, or white. Daffodil buds should be swelled and their upper stems gracefully arched like the neck of a swan.

Do not be surprised if the flowers are slightly wilted by the time they are brought home. To revive them, do what professional florists do: "harden" them. This means infusing the flowers with water.

First, remove a quarter of an inch from the bottom of each stem with a sharp knife. Then wrap the stems and blossoms in wax paper.

With daffodils, wrap the stems but not the flower buds. All bunches must be wrapped securely to keep the stems straight when they absorb the water.

Fill a deep bucket with six to eight inches of tepid water and submerge the stems. Place the bucket in a cool location for three to six hours of conditioning before arranging.

Daffodils must be hardened separately because their stems exude a substance toxic to other flowers. Once conditioned, however, they can be incorporated into the same arrangement with tulips, hyacinths and other plant materials with no fear of damage.

After all the preliminaries have been taken care of, the artist in you can emerge. The secret to a successful arrangement of spring flowers is to begin with an overall design in mind.
